

Samuel Salako

Samuel Salako is a Partner in the Corporate Services Group of Olajide Oyewole LLP, with over 12 years' experience of commercial practice advising on company re-organisation and corporate restructuring, private equity investments and corporate acquisitions amongst other complex multidisciplinary corporate advisory services.

Samuel has been involved in intellectual property practice since 2004 and played key role in helping to develop the Firm's renowned media, entertainment and intellectual property practice. Samuel's experience in intellectual property field cuts across negotiating a variety of media and entertainment contracts, including international music licensing, joint ventures and co-productions, content licensing, legal and regulatory matters, amongst others.

While Samuel currently works in the Corporate Practice Group of the Firm, he maintains a keen interest in intellectual property and brand protection. His most recent work include analysing brand infringement and counterfeiting problems faced by a foremost Nigerian publisher and a foreign alcoholic beverage manufacturer, advising on anti-counterfeiting and brand protection strategies, and implementing tailored measures with outstanding success.

Samuel has a Master of Laws degree with distinction in International Commercial Law from the University of Glasgow, United Kingdom and is called to the Nigerian Bar.
